International Holocaust Memorial Day was created on 27 January 2000, on the anniversary of the liberation of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp, when representatives from 46 governments, including the UK, met in Stockholm to discuss Holocaust remembrance, education and research. Following the meeting, all attendees signed the Stockholm Declaration committing to “commemorate the victims of the Holocaust and to honour those who stood against it”. The day also commemorates those killed in more recent genocides in Cambodia, Rwanda, Bosnia and Darfur.

We hope engaging with this week’s Microlearning will serve as an opportunity to reflect and learn more about the history and modern day implications of genocide and how it impacts our colleagues and fellow community members.
